FOR PRACTITIONERS WHO WORK WITH MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN EXPERIENCING DOMESTIC AND FAMILY VIOLENCE

- Learning how to observe and think about the infant/child, and to use what is occurring in front of you to help families build new pathways of relating which energises and grows healing, and enhances healthy attachments.
- To gain an appreciation of the research and literature on early brain development and the impacts of trauma, and how to use this knowledge respectfully and usefully in practice.
- How to use yourself as a worker, to bring about a space of gentle curiosity, reflection and playfulness which affirms a narrative of restoration.

Dr Wendy Bunston is a vibrant and passionate speaker who runs wb training and consultancy and is an adjunct lecturer at La Trobe University, Victoria Australia.

She specialises in working directly with infants, children and their parents impacted by domestic and family violence, as well as providing reflective supervision and training to multiple early childhood, homelessness, maternal child health and counselling services across Melbourne and Australia.
